When the leaves start turning on Mill Mountain and the evenings get cooler, most Roanoke households shift indoors. Windows close, the heat comes on and the house becomes the center of family life again, right as Thanksgiving and the holiday season approach. A fall cleaning service is the perfect way to start that indoor season with a clean slate.

Getting the House Ready for Cooler Months

The Happy Housekeepers has offered spring and fall cleanings for years, and fall has its own priorities. Summer humidity leaves its mark on walls and woodwork, ceiling fans have been spinning for months and are often coated in dust, and the kitchen is about to work harder than at any other time of year. A fall clean can include washing walls and woodwork, cleaning light fixtures and cleaning inside ovens and refrigerators before the holiday cooking begins.

Running the furnace for the first time each year tends to stir up dust that has settled in vents and on surfaces, so dusting window sills, baseboards, blinds and ceiling fans makes a noticeable difference to how a home looks and feels. Leaves and mud also get tracked in more often once the weather turns, Visit website so a thorough vacuum of carpets and a proper mop of hard-surface floors helps keep entryways under control.

The company has been serving the Roanoke Valley since 1979, and the team understands how quickly the calendar fills up at this time of year.

As always, employees are bonded and insured, products and equipment are supplied, and you can request specific products for floors or appliances if you have a preference. After the first visit, someone from the office will call to make sure everything met your expectations. That personal follow-up has been part of the business since founder Mary Jane Wszolek started it.

Fall is a good time to think about the outside of the house as it affects the inside, too. Once leaves start falling across Roanoke County, entry mats and hallway floors take a beating, and mudrooms fill up with boots and jackets. Asking the crew to give extra attention to entryways, stairs and the kitchen during autumn visits keeps the dirt from spreading through the rest of the home, and it can easily be written into your plan.
