Why People Search for "Selling" a Driver's License

When individuals use terms associated to offering a license, they typically refer to one of 3 legitimate administrative processes. Understanding these procedures assists clarify what can and can not be done legally in Italy.

1. Giving Up a Foreign License for an Italian One

When non-EU nationals from countries with reciprocal arrangements (such as specific U.S. states, depending on residency guidelines, or specific South American and Asian nations) transfer to Italy, they are eventually needed to transform their foreign license.

- The Process: The foreign license is physically given up to the Italian authorities, and in exchange, an Italian driver's license is provided.
- The Misconception: Some see this exchange loosely as "trading" or "offering" one license for another, but it is strictly an administrative conversion managed by the state.

2. Upgrading or Changing License Categories

Motorists in some cases want to transition from one class of automobile to another. While you can not sell your Category B (car) license to somebody else, you can give up specific credentials if you are upgrading to business tiers, or you can let a specialized license lapse if you no longer satisfy the health requirements.

3. The Italian Point System and "Selling" Points (Illegal)

A notorious myth in Italy includes chauffeurs offering their staying license indicate habitual traffic violators.

- How it works (in theory): A motorist with a tidy record gets a fine and points reduction, but rather of taking the charge, they unlawfully attribute the infraction to somebody else who accepts "offer" their points for cash.
- The Reality: This practice is prohibited. The Italian Traffic Police (Polizia Stradale) actively examine discrepancies between who was caught committing the violation (through speed cameras or patrols) and who ultimately takes the point deduction. Doing so makes up fraud against the state.
