

Why Omaha Businesses Choose Erickson Sederstrom Law Firm In 1967, Don Erickson opened a small legal practice in Omaha, and Charles V. Sederstrom joined him as a partner shortly after. Nearly six decades later, Erickson | Sederstrom P.C., L.L.O. has grown into a full-service firm with more than 30 attorneys, yet the reason so many local companies keep coming back has less to do with size than with continuity. A business that first hired the firm to form an entity may return years later for an acquisition, a lease dispute, or a transition plan, and some of those relationships now span more than one generation of ownership. The practice areas line up with the way local companies actually operate. A manufacturer along the 108th Street corridor may need a corporate lawyer for a capital raise in the spring, an employment attorney to update its employee handbook in the summer, and a business litigation attorney when a supplier contract falls apart in the fall. Under one roof, the firm handles corporate law, employment law, litigation, real estate, tax, construction, insurance, intellectual property, aviation, and estate planning. That breadth means a business owner working with one Omaha law firm is not starting from scratch with a new set of lawyers each time a different kind of problem appears. Omaha's economy blends Fortune 500 headquarters with a deep base of family-owned operations, and the firm works with both ends of that spectrum. Contractors, trucking and logistics companies, insurers, agricultural businesses, and tech startups each bring their own risks. For employers, the firm advises and defends on wage and hour compliance, discrimination claims, OSHA issues, and non-compete agreements, and it publishes updates on changes such as the Nebraska WARN Act, LB 921, which expanded notice requirements for workforce reductions when it was enacted on April 14, 2026.

Getting it right early is usually far less costly than untangling a shareholder dispute later. Do I need an estate planning attorney in Nebraska? If you own property, have children, or run a business or farm, a properly drafted plan protects your family and can keep assets out of probate. Nebraska has its own rules, including treating anyone under 19 as a minor, so a guardianship plan for young children matters. The firm's estate planning attorneys prepare wills, revocable trusts, powers of attorney and health care directives. How long does probate take in Nebraska? Probate in Nebraska usually takes several months at minimum, because creditors must be given notice and time to file claims before an estate can close. Contested matters or complex assets can stretch that much longer. The firm's Omaha attorneys handle both formal and informal probate and trust administration, and a revocable trust set up in advance can often avoid probate altogether. What does an employment attorney do for employers? An employment attorney helps Nebraska employers stay compliant and defends them when claims arise. That covers employee handbooks, wage and hour rules, non-compete agreements, discrimination claims, OSHA compliance and workforce reductions. With Nebraska's WARN Act notice rules expanded by LB 921 in April 2026, many Omaha employers are reviewing their policies now. What is business litigation?
