How Transactions Work: Steam API and P2P Trading

To understand how a CSGO gambling site operates, one needs to understand how items move between the player and the platform. Historically, sites utilized automated Steam accounts (bots) to hold and move items. However, due to stringent trade cooldowns and restrictions executed by Valve, the landscape has actually shifted.

Standard Bot Trading

- Deposit: The user starts a trade offer through the site, sending a skin to a Steam bot.
- Play: The site credits the user's balance based upon the Steam Market worth of the skin.
- Withdraw: The user requests a skin withdrawal, and a bot sends a trade deal containing the asked-for item back to the user.

Peer-to-Peer (P2P) Trading

To bypass Valve's stringent trade limitations, many modern-day platforms make use of P2P systems. Instead of the site holding the items, the platform connects a buyer straight with a seller. When a gamer wins a product, the site instructs another player to send that item directly to the winner. This technique has mostly changed traditional bot stocks due to its increased security versus trade restrictions.

The Risks Associated with CSGO Gambling
