If a gamer squanders successfully, they win their initial bet multiplied by the current value. However, if the video game crashes before they cash out, the bet is lost totally. The catch is that the crash point is completely random, figured out by a cryptographic algorithm before the round even starts. A round might crash quickly at £ 1.00 \text x £, or it could soar past £ 100 \text x £, £ 500 \text x £, and even higher.
